CONCEPT The private office, long a distinguishing feature of the corporate world, is evolving into a new kind of space in the information economy. Today's private office is more flexible, more adaptable and more accessible, responding to changing demographics, new technologies and a new emphasis on collaboration and enterprise performance. ¶ Dossier™ is classic casegoods furniture with a clean architectural look and all of the flexibility desired in today's executive office. Layered surfaces and upper storage combine in multiple ways to meet user needs and spatial constraints. Low storage doubles as bench seating for visitors. Technology support is fully integrated into furniture design. Fine materials and refined details offer an aesthetic of quiet elegance.

Dossier is comprised of table desks and runoffs, credenzas, pedestals, cabinets and a broad offering of upper storage. Overhead cabinets integrate with open bookshelves for easy access to papers, books and other materials. A 12-inch-deep option is ideal for narrower offices and can accommodate a large flat-screen monitor to support shared review of information. Large freestanding tables offer a convenient place to meet with clients or colleagues. ¶ While the executive office is still considered an essentially private space, it has also become a place where people gather to converse with minimal interruption or distraction. Freestanding table desks, open-ended runoffs, guest chairs or low credenzas with cushion tops help to support such collaboration. Dossier is also suitable for conference rooms or boardrooms adjacent to the private office.

COLLECTION Dossier echoes the crisp linearity of mid-century modern furniture, but also offers aesthetic variations achieved through a choice of finish, materials and scale. A desk with a lighter finish, nickel-plated frame and slim ½-inch wood top looks fresh and contemporary. A deeper finish and 1½-inch top offer a more substantial appearance. Both are fitted with fine nickel-plated pulls that accent the architectural elegance of the Dossier collection. ¶ Dossier is designed to integrate easily with office architecture and Teknion® products, including District® furniture and Optos® and Altos® architectural wall systems. ¶ CHOICE An appealing material palette includes beautifully finished quarter-cut veneers accented with satin nickel details. Grain orientation can be vertical or horizontal.

Additional options include: back-painted glass for overhead storage doors, magnetic back-painted glass for wall panels, leather inserts on desks, and glass or solid surface for the wall panel shelf and accessory-cabinet shelf. Tackable wall panels are also available. ¶ CONNECTION Today's executive may make use of a laptop, a computer with large or multiple monitors, an iPad, iPhone, BlackBerry or other digital work tools and thus requires an integrated approach to technology support. Dossier supports a rich technology platform providing access to power and communications through all furniture tops, as well as ready access to wall outlets and built-in space for wire management and delivery.

MODERN

OVERLAPPING PLANES CREATE MORE USEFUL SURFACES IN LESS SPACE. HERE, A WORKSURFACE IS LAYERED OVER LOW STORAGE, WHILE A GLASS SHELF ACTS AS A THIRD TIER.
