Girard Environmental Enrichment Panels

Designer

Alexander Girard

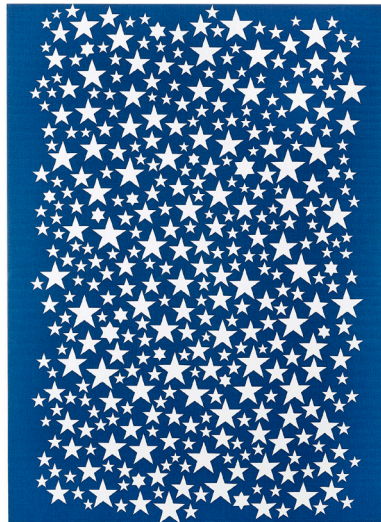

Original Production Date

1972

These decorative silkscreen designs known as the Girard Environmental Enrichment Panels were originally released in 1972 to personalize and add an element of "aesthetic functionalism" to the installation of Action Office environments. Unlike Girard's printed textiles, the panels consist of single stand-alone images that range from abstract patterns to figurative pictograms. Playful and bold, the Girard Environmental Enrichment Panels serve as the exclamation point at the end of Girard's long tenure with Herman Miller.
