Mattiazzi Forcina Stool's design is reminiscent of the shape of a bobby pin—hence the name Forcina, which means “hairpin” in Italian. Computerguided machinery bends stainless steel rods with precision, shaping them into a sturdy frame for the wooden seat. The base of the stool extends up into a small loop, making it easy to grip and move around a café or other hospitality settings. The design is available as a low stool or a barstool with an integrated footrest, adding to its comfort and accessibility.
