Designing for Wellbeing

Organizational worktools like SOTO offer a wide range of options that provide convenient storage, technology management and organization. Task lighting such as the dash LED Task Light (above and right, top image) easily adjusts to provide optimal lighting in nearly every environment, reducing eyestrain and improving worker comfort. Computer support tools—flat panel monitor arms, technology management, laptop shelves and keyboard platforms—bring technology to the worker, maximize workspace and adapt to posture changes.

A Range of Spaces

When spaces accommodate both social and work needs—with open spaces for collaborative work or more private spaces for heads down work—people feel more engaged and connected to their colleagues. FYI monitor arms adjust to improve productivity while supporting multiple postures as people move throughout the day. Slatwall and SlatRail organizational worktools make the most of vertical space, allowing workers to personalize their environment while providing efficient organization.
