

Portrait™ Chair

With his Portrait Chair, Norwegian designer Andreas Engesvik created a carefully balanced timelessness. The design was the winning entry in a competition sponsored by the National Museum of Norway. The brief called for a welcoming, multifunctional chair for use in the museum's public spaces. The jury, led by British designer Jasper Morrison, lauded Portrait as "a beautiful chair that adds a seductive softness and elegance to the room where it will be used."

Benefits

- Portrait's sinuous lines and universal forms bring forth the freer, more poetic aesthetic characteristic of Norwegian design
- The geometry of the chair is naturally generous and comfortable
- Precise execution and refined details present a new twist on a familiar typology of a metal-framed chair with wood seat and backrest
